MRS. PORTER FARWELL

East Bethel community was saddened Friday, June 6, with the passing on of an old resident, Mrs. May Farwell, wife of Porter Farwell, who was born on Holt Hill and moved here when a baby of about three weeks, and has always lived in this same home since.

Mrs. Farwell was taken sick two weeks ago with the Grippe and failed to rally after other complications set in. Always having a cheerful word for all and ready to give a neighbor or friend a helping hand, and always loving her home and family and making comfort for them all.

Her daughter coming from Rumford at the first of her sickness and with the help of her brother and family have constantly tended her until the last. She was a member of Alder River Grange.

Mrs. Farwell was born March 30, 1862, the daughter of the late William Orlando Holt and Debra Young. On November 13, 1880 she was united in marriage with Porter Farwell. Two children being born to this union, Orlando, who lives on the home farm, and Ella who married Burchard Russell of Rumford. She also has six grandchildren and her husband who will constantly mourn his helpmate.

She was laid to rest at Middle Intervale, amid a profusion of beautiful flowers which mutely spoke of the high esteem in which she was held. Rev. Mr. Edwards speaking words of comfort to the sorrowing family and they knowing across the river awaits the loved one gone before.

GOULD TRIMS MADISON 5-3

The highly touted champions of the Kennebec Valley League received quite some surprise here last Wednesday when the local Academy nine handed them a 5 to 3 beating.

"A" Chesebro pitched a beautiful game, holding the visitors to 4 scattered hits, while the winners were finding the ace of the Madison outfit, Cookson, and Demko for 8 hits including a home run by Alger in the first inning with one on.

There were some fine pieces of baseball displayed such as Littlehale starting a double play after handling a hot liner back of second base and Addison Saunders beautiful running catch for the last out of the game.

"UNCLE HOWARD," A MAN FROM MAINE

Howard F. Thurston was a man who lived the allotted three score years and ten. His hair was generously sprinkled with gray. His eyes were piercing but sympathetic. His other features were large without being coarse. His figure was upright and, even at his advanced age, his shoulders were as square as possible. He was a man weighing slightly under two hundred pounds; his height just fell short of the six-foot mark.

He was born of sturdy New England parents, the seventh of ten children. All his life he worked hard and long to supply the wants of his family. Even to the end, although bothered by a weak heart, he was not content to step from the harness. He still kept a supervising eye upon the business he had established and which is now managed by his son. Every day saw him at the factory although the doctors had advised rest and quiet for him.

While still a boy he was deprived of the sight of one eye through an accident. Undaunted at this handicap and the later loss of a part of one foot, he fought on in his struggle with life. With undying ambition and perseverance he won for himself a place in the sun. In addition to the material wealth that he amassed, he won the love and respect of the whole community.

He married, while still in his twenties, a woman who was his companion throughout the struggle and by whom he had three children, two surviving infancy. Always a kind husband and father, although inheriting a sternness from his Puritan forbears, he enjoyed the admiration and affection of his family. His son he took into business with him as a partner. A few years ago he left him the active management of the concern. His daughter also felt a helping hand when trouble was near.

Hard though his lot was, his love for his fellows was always evident in his efforts to remedy conditions in the community. Four foster-children, of whom I was one, he welcomed to his home. He treated them with the sternness and affection of a real father, and he received their whole-hearted love. He was never of the type to practice deceit or dishonesty and he never let anyone under his control have any influence concerning his attitude.

In his youth the finances of the family would not allow him to receive more education than that afforded by a rural school. He studied a great deal, especially the sciences, and it would have been hard to find any invention with which he was not familiar. In fact, he was an inventor himself. He found a method of manufacturing hard wood bowls whereby their output was quadrupled. He did not seek to make gains from this discovery other than the improvement of his own manufactures. He made other innovations that raised the standard of his employees' working conditions.

All his life he had one great principle for his guide: "One hundred cents on the dollar." He always gave the full value in every business deal and exact of the same. He required a full amount of work from his men but never failed to reward any deserving effort. His business dealings were a fine example of his own integrity. To him, "honesty was the best policy." Not only because of financial benefits derived thereby and also because of the satisfaction such a course gave to his own ideals.

Born of sturdy, poor parents, he inherited from them an undaunted will, a strong character, and a genius for industry. His life was a practical example of the Golden Rule as applied to material affairs. Although he was a member of a church that recognizes no creature he was none of a Christian man more who were the flesh. He was a man, an honest, fearless man. He practiced what he preached.

"There patient showed us the wise course to steer.

A candid, clear, and a friend to all. They taught us how to live, and what to do."

Roy E. Davis.

SERVING MANY BUSINESSES

Experience of large fleet owners reveals the unusual reliability and economy of the new Ford

A SIGNIFICANT TRIBUTE to the value of the new Ford is found in its increasing use by Federal, state and city governments and by large industrial companies which keep careful day-by-day cost records. In most instances, the Ford has been chosen only after exhaustive tests of every factor that contributes to good performance—speed, power, safety, comfort, low cost of operation and up-keep, reliability and long life.

Prominent among the companies using the Ford are the Associated Companies of the Bell System, Armour and Company, The Borden Company, Continental Baking Corporation, Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, General Electric Company, Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, Kellogg Company, Knickerbocker Ice Company, Morton Salt Company, Pillsbury Flour Mills Company, The Procter and Gamble Company, and Swift & Company.

Each of these companies uses a large number of Ford cars and trucks. The Associated Companies of the Bell System use more than eight thousand.

Modern business moves at a fast pace and it needs the Ford. Daily, in countless ways and places, it helps to speed the production and delivery of the world's goods and extend the useful service of men and companies.

Constant, steady operation over many thousands of miles emphasizes the advantages of the sound design of the Ford car, its high quality of materials, and unusual accuracy in manufacturing. Beneath its graceful lines and beautiful colors there is a high degree of mechanical excellence.

An example of the value built into the Ford is the use of more than twenty ball and roller bearings. They are hidden within the car and you may never see them. Yet they play an important part in satisfactory, economical performance. Their function is similar to the jewels of a fine watch.

Throughout the Ford chassis, a ball or roller bearing is used at every place where it is needed to reduce friction and wear and give smooth, reliable mechanical operation.

At many points, as on the transmission counter-shaft, clutch release, fan and pump shaft, and front drive shaft, these ball and roller bearings are used where less costly types of bearings might be considered adequate.

Additional instances of the high quality built into the Ford are the extensive use of steel forgings, fully enclosed four-wheel brakes, Rustless Steel, four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers, aluminum pistons, chrome silicon alloy valves, torque-tube drive, three-quarter floating rear axle, and the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield.

The Ford policy has always been to use the best possible material for each part and then, through large production, give it to the public at low cost.

RUPERT ALDRICH FOR CLERK

On June 16th the Republicans of Oxford County will elect the successor to the position of Clerk of Courts, now held by Donald B. Partridge. Three men aspire to the position. There can be but one winner. I believe that Rupert F. Aldrich is the one to whom the honor is due.

As a resident of the neighboring town of Paris where Rupert Aldrich was raised, and as his friend, I wish to present a few facts regarding his past accomplishments. Those of us who have known him take a certain justifiable pride in forwarding his candidacy. We know he is man capable of handling the job and worthy of your confidence.

Mr. Aldrich is twenty-two years of age, married a graduate of Paris High School, a Bates College man, and has had two years of experience studying law in the office of Donald B. Partridge of Norway. As a sideline of work he makes Saw Frames. This special Buck Saw frame was designed by Mr. Aldrich and is the only handcarved frame on the market. This work spare time and evenings has brought sufficient returns to support his family and continue the study of Law.

"Rup" Aldrich's High School record is a creditable one. In his Junior year he was Vice-President of the Athletic Association, Manager of the School Paper, Class Secretary, and Member of the Student Council. His Senior year recorded him a President of the Athletic Association, Class Treasurer, and Member of the Student Council. The "Chronicle", the school paper was dedicated to him in his Senior year. He also received the P. H. S. Alumni Scholarship of $50.00.

"Rup" Aldrich's High School Athletic Record is a brilliant one. It is written in indelible letters into the records of Paris High and into the hearts of all who know him. In Baseball, he played 4 years, two of which were under the tutelage of "Dave" Masterman. He was Capt. of Track 2 years and High Point Man. He was Capt. of Football 1 year and letter man for three more. Basketball credited him with 3 letters. A crowning accomplishment in Winter Sports gave him the Captaincy of that for 2 years. He was State Champion for 4 years in the 100 yd. Dash-Skies, State Champion for three years in the Cross Country Run-Skies, and State Champion for 2 years in the 100 yd. Dash-Snowshoes. These Winter Sports records were gained from an open field including High Schools and Prep Schools.

During High School years Aldrich caught Baseball 2 seasons for Norway in the Pine Tree League. Since High School days he has been obliged to drop all athletics due to a severe leg trouble which finally culminated in the amputation of one leg.

The year 1927 at Bates College saw a continuation of the same courageous spirit of the past. He was a member of the Orchestra, Band, and Glee Club.

In 1928 he married Miss Mary Swan of Norway and began the study of law. By working spare times and evenings making Buck Saw frames, he has supported his family and continued his studies. He is a prominent worker in the Church.

At this period in life you meet him in a political way. This is his first venture into political life. He is making a personal canvass of every town in Oxford County. Every friend of Rupert Aldrich will O. K. me in the statement that he has proved himself absolutely worthy of your favor—a vote in the Primaries of June 16th.

Sincerely yours,
Harold C. Perham,
South Paris, Maine.

ABBOTT
COUNTY ATTORNEY

To the Republican Voters of Bethel, Albany, Gilead, Greenwood, Newry, Mason, Stow and Milton Plantation:

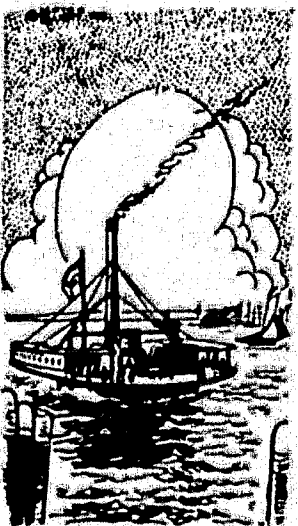

Next Monday, June 16th, is the June Primary vote. I am a candidate for the office of County Attorney and since January 1st I have conducted an extensive campaign, visiting every town in the County and have personally seen as many of the voters of each town as possible besides leaving posters in all business places, thereby introducing myself to the voters as it has been impossible for me to see each voter personally.

I am an active practicing attorney in South Paris (the County seat), well experienced in court trial work which I have been conducting for the past five years, therefore I feel well qualified for this office.

Custom in the past has held that each section of the County should receive representation by this office after every second term; Hugh Hastings of Fryeburg, for the western part of the County, had this office for the customary two terms (four years) after which Mr. Flanagan of Rumford (your section of the County) is now finishing his customary two terms. The central section of our County should now be entitled to this office by the established custom; Oxford County is a large county and it would seem that the customary two terms of four years should satisfy the average office seeker. When you vote next Monday for the office of County Attorney, I will deeply appreciate your support in my behalf and in behalf of the central part of the County which should receive the customary representation at this time.

(Signed) E. WALKER ABBOTT

THE FERRYBOAT IN 1858

One of the first steam-powered means of transportation was the paddle-wheeled ferryboat. Robert Fulton was the first one to introduce such a craft in America, and the development went ahead in leaps and bounds. Above is a picture of a more advanced type of the side-wheelers which was used around the year 1858. Ain't We Got Fun?

Many are the notions of what is humorous. The practical joker, who really isn't practical at all, is as old as the human race. We have no doubt that, if the human race originally went around on all fours and at night hung suspended by its caudal appendage from the limbs of the forest primeval, there were practical jokesters who occasionally slipped the tail of a slumbering friend, causing him to tumble into the mud and muck below. Practitioners of the modern civilized race sometimes, with great display of originality call up undertakers, ambulances, real dealers, transfer companies, flautists and others and give them false orders or ask them falsely to report at a certain address. The empty trip causes a real money loss to the companies concerned and an annoyance to the target of a joke. If it is done for a joke, it isn't good humor. It is plain silliness. If it is done in a spirit of revenge, it is worse. Besides being cowardly, it is plain dirty.

A Dutch breakfast is like no other meal in the world, according to the World Traveler. There are, to start with, at least seven kinds of bread—plain white bread, ginger bread, plain buns, buns with raisins, brown bread, toasted biscuits, sweet cakes and a kind of fruit cake. You will find at least three or four kinds of meat—cold sliced veal, roast beef, ham and sausages. Then, if you don't get it all at once, you smell the cheese, two or three of the Dutch specialties, including Limburger and Edam. There are several dishes piled with boiled eggs, and, of course, there are jams and honey and spiced fruits. The climax is a pot of steaming coffee, hot the inspired beverage of the rest of Europe, but the real thing from the Dutch colonies.

It is astonishing to win. No one likes to lose. But when a team enters upon play it knows that it is to be defeated by the rules of the game and to have before the judgment and rules of the officials. If such losses occur, or if by some chance, unexpected penalties are inflicted the team that is well grounded in the attributes of true sportsmanship will be disposed to hope for a victory in spite of the odds. If that team loses, its upshot will be to make the more sport out of it. It is a victory in the more impressive.

American railroads have saved during the last two years $150,000,000 by the more efficient and economical use of fuel. This is a very remarkable showing. It is not due to any cheapening of the price of fuel, but to the reduction of the quantity used. A pound of coal was made to do more work, so that it required less pounds to accomplish the object. In 1929 this saving amounted to over $75,000. It is by directing its attention to such points that a company is enabled to effect a saving.

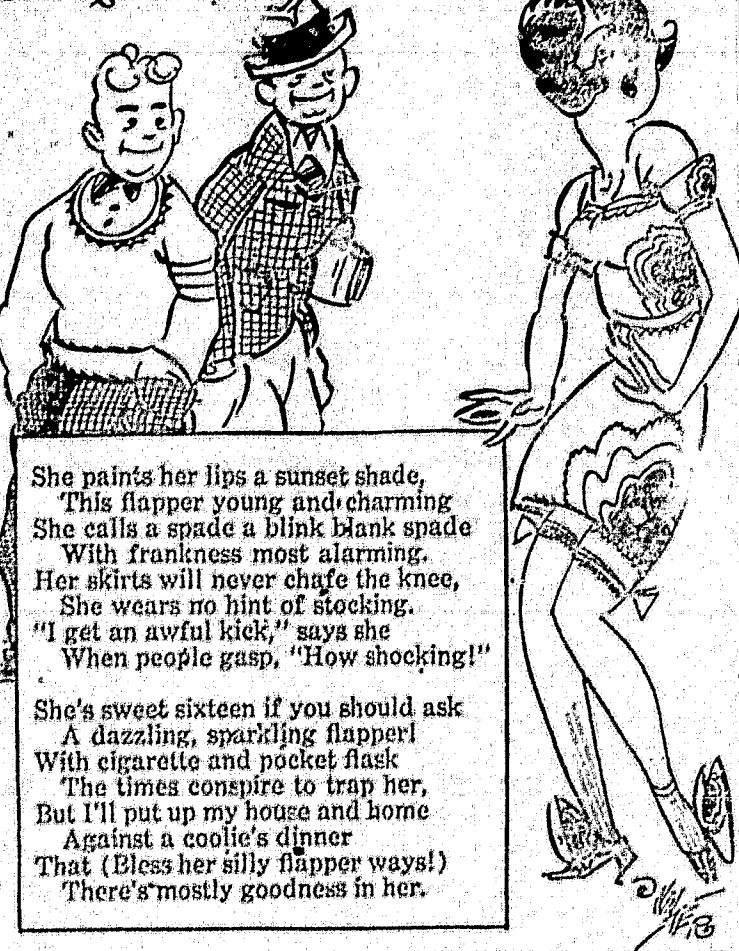

Animals and birds of the Northwest instinctively know that they are protected in the boundaries of the Yellowstone National park and fight snowdrifts to get up into the park away from trappers and hunters. Last spring park rangers counted 17,000 elk, 700 moose, 600 black and grizzly bears and numerous deer and small animals within the borders of the park, which includes 3,470 square miles.

What we need more than international disarmament is a general domestic disarmament day on which all residents of the United States, not in the police or the army, will be obliged to throw their pistols and ammunition on a common pile designed for destruction.

The Chinese authorities undertake to punish smugglers who carry opium to America. The American authorities are no less alert, but the narcotic traffic still asserts itself as a part of the crime wave which rises on both sides of the Pacific.

The Flapper

By James Lewis

She paints her lips a sunset shade,
This flapper young and charming
She calls a spade a blink blank spade
With frankness most alarming.
Her skirts will never chafe the knee,
She wears no hint of stocking.
"I get an awful kick," says she
When people gasp, "How shocking!"

She's sweet sixteen if you should ask
A dazzling, sparkling flapper!
With cigarette and pocket flask
The times conspire to trap her,
But I'll put up my house and home
Against a cooie's dinner
That (Bless her silly flapper ways!)
There's mostly goodness in her.

Airplane's "Flying" and "Cruising" Speed Differ

Cruising speed of an airplane is the speed at which it runs to best advantage considering oil and fuel consumption rate, vibration, laboring of and strain on motor. In other words, the speed one would care to run the motor (or airplane) on a long trip so that one would not burn up too much gas per hour at, perhaps, a slightly lower motor speed at, perhaps, no decrease in airplane speed; so that the motor would not waste oil; so that the motor would vibrate least; so that the motor would take it most easily. Comparable to an automobile there is, top speed—say 65 miles per hour—and a cruising speed (speed at which a car runs most smoothly with not too much care in steering, say at 50 miles per hour). In a plane, top speed might be 105 miles per hour; cruising speed, 90 miles per hour. Speed necessary to keep the plane in air is called flying speed. Minimum flying speed is called stalling speed. Landing speed is usually about two miles per hour greater than stalling speed.

Founder of Vassar

Vassar college was established by Matthew Vassar who was born in the county of Norfolk, England, in 1722, emigrated to America, and settled at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., where he made a comfortable fortune as a brewer. In 1801 he gave the sum of $400,000 to found Vassar college, near Poughkeepsie. He died June 23, 1803, while reading an address to the trustees of the college. Besides the initial gift, he left the college a large sum in his will.

Small Change

To the loan desk of Brightwood library came a six-year-old with a book one day overdue.
"You owe 2 cents for this," the librarian remarked. With obvious reluctance the youngster laid a nickel on the desk.
"I haven't any smaller change," he said, ruefully, "have you?"—Indianapolis News.

Capital of Contrasts

Hungary, the ancient kingdom of the Magyars on the Danube, contains in Budapest, its capital, one of the most imposing and beautiful cities of Europe, a worthy companion capital to Vienna in the old Austro-Hungarian empire and now the metropolis of the reduced post-war Hungary, the "Kingdom without a King."
Budapest, a thriving modern city of more than a million population, lies on both sides of the Danube. In the old part of the city, are the royal castle, the coronation church, stately palaces and many ancient artistic monuments. West on the left bank of the river, presents a striking contrast to quiet Buda. It is the bustling commercial and industrial section of the new city.

Maiden's Heart Won by Suitor's Bank Balance

Bill and Jack, living in the same Long Island town, were rivals for the hand of pretty Betty, but, although she remained neutral and showed no preference, each considered himself the favored one. They remained friends, having made a gentleman's agreement that there would be no hard feelings on the part of the unsuccessful suitor.
However, there was no curb on the manner of courting her—and that's where fate stepped in. Bill continually sent Betty flowers and candy and took her to theaters and the opera. Jack, on the other hand, was decidedly stingy. But one night, after a pleasant visit, he managed to leave his blank book behind him in a chair, as if it had fallen out of his pocket.
Betty, being human and feminine, could not resist her curiosity—and that is why she married Jack. Flowers and candy can be forgotten, but real money in a bank speaks volumes.
—New York Sun.

Franklin's God

Benjamin Franklin's god resembled a Jehovah, surrounded by his cherubim, a deity that might have been dreamed of by a disciple of Plato.
The supreme being of Franklin is separated from us by a series of beings, superior to us, inferior to him, each installed in a planet of its own, and ruling over the satellites which he long to it. As an inhabitant of the earth, Franklin thought himself obliged to worship the god who lived in the sun, and he made a liturgy for him—a kind of abridgement of the Anglican prayers, to which he remained faithful. Like a good Platonist, he demanded of this god virtues, knowledge, an after life.—Baltimore Sun.

Pressure of Water

Iron vessels and other heavy vessels sink to the ocean bed, and the water pressure has nothing to do with holding them up. Water is practically incompressible, so that even at the greatest depths the water of the ocean is very little heavier than the water near the surface. The volume of the ship is therefore much heavier than the same volume of water at any depth, and the ship will sink. The pressure of a fluid is exerted equally from all directions and not simply upward on the vessel. For a ship to remain suspended halfway between the surface and the bottom, it would have to be constructed of some light material and have a very light cargo.

Russell Gordon Carter, famous as a writer of stories for boys, said it was his experience that boys seldom remember the names of the authors, but never forget the stories that they like.
"One of my neighbor's boys once read a story of mine and told me about it. The fact that my name was on the cover had been entirely overlooked and he was much surprised when I told him I had written the story and pointed out my name."
"Well," he said with a grin, "don't waste time bragging about this one, but get busy and write some more like it."

Early Arctic Voyages

The Arctic regions were explored as early as 1492 by John Davis, who in that year reached latitude 72 degrees 12 minutes north. He was followed by William Barents in 1596, Henry Hudson in 1607 and William Baffin in 1616. The North pole was reached by Peary on April 6, 1909. The south polar regions were explored by Capt. James Cook in 1774. The South pole was discovered by Roald Amundsen on December 14, 1911.

Political Advertisement "OXFORD BEARS"

To all citizens of Maine the mention of Oxford County brings to mind the "Oxford Bears". In the latter part of the Eighteenth Century the fair region now comprising old Oxford County afforded an excellent home for those interesting furry folk, the black bear. The gracious hills and the delectable valleys; the wide river bottoms yielding succulent roots and clams; the snug ravines winter lodgings were had for the taking; and those bold heights, where Citizen Bear could look over wide expanses of country, was a paradise for ursus americanus.

It naturally evolved that in political nomenclature a citizen of this county was dubbed an "Oxford Bear". As early as 1830, just a hundred years ago, this appellation was commonly used. Even at an earlier date the nickname was bestowed in a geographical sense. In 1851 the Oxford County Engine Company was organized at Norway. Those were the heroic days of the hand-pumped fire-engines, when as much interest was excited by rival claims as is shown to-day over ball games and yachting. The Bear became a fetish for the Oxford County man. The engine company carrying the name traveled victoriously from one water-pumping contest to another. Under the banner of the Bear, the Oxford County citizen believed he possessed a psychological advantage over his opponent, or rival. The name was worn as a distinction, and is to this day.

In 1869 an Oxford County company of a hundred men, handsomely uniformed and wearing tall bearskin hats, attended the opening of the European North American Railway in the northern part of the State. President Grant was there, and was among the admirers of the appearance of the Oxford County Bears. The company won first prize in the drilling contest, and the members believed their tutelage guardian did much to inspire them with the aplomb which permitted them to "bring home the bacon." A year prior to this everyone knew or ought to have known, that it was the sympathy of the Benevolent Bears that permitted the Pemessee-wassee Base Ball Club to defeat all rivals, including the Bowdoin College, the Portland, and other Lewiston nines and to retain the silver ball for more than a year.

When the Honorable John Swasey was induced to run for Congress, the Bears turned out and wholeheartedly endorsed him. A Bear was taken to the State convention, and the opposition promptly capitulated, and Mr. Swasey, endorsed by the furry brotherhood, was elected.

The last time the Oxford Bear politically left the "Hills of Oxford" he was carried triumphantly through the streets of Lewiston and Auburn by the Oxford Delegation in honor of that great American, Theodore Roosevelt.

Unnumerable instances of this help from the hills, when men aspire to worthy accomplishments, is threaded through the history of Old Oxford.
Now another son of Oxford is in the arena. He is Donald B. Partridge, clerk of courts, and a candidate for Congress. The Bears back in the hills, have been howling, and are now coming from their fastnesses, howling loudly for the election of "Don" Partridge. If we judge by the achievements of Oxford men for the last hundred years, the medicine of the Bears is powerful. The names of men who have won distinction in various phases of human endeavor while under the protection of the Bear Clan are almost innumerable. If the voters of the second district follow the sage advice of the Bears, another son of Oxford will be returned to Congress.

We suppose the editor of the Congressional Record doesn't even know what a blue pencil looks like.

It wasn't so many weeks ago that a lot of people were complaining because the weather was overwarm.

Because it is good news, this paragraph never grows old: Peace has broken out again, in China.

A man's full name should be the same name he uses when sober, but occasionally it isn't.

The office of Clerk of Courts is one that necessarily involves work of legal nature. I am a practicing attorney and it is only natural, therefore, that I am better qualified to fulfill the duties of the office than one who has not had such training.

POLITICAL GOSSIP

To the Editor:

The statement recently made by my opponent, Mr. Flanagan of Rumford, who is running for a third term for the office of County Attorney, "that the Clerk of Courts office is so closely associated with the administration of Criminal Law that it is not considered advisable to have a new County Attorney and a new Clerk of Courts going into office at the same time" is quite misleading to the voters and has no connection at all in the fuller and more complete administration of Criminal Law, and with justice to Mr. Flanagan I think this should be explained to the voters.

First let me say, that the Clerk of Courts office is purely administrative, while the County Attorney's office is strictly executive, which is a considerable difference.

The Clerk of Courts office and duties are well explained in Chapter 84 of our Revised Statutes; it is more of less clerical work such as bookkeeping for Judges, making files for new and retired cases and recording them, signing and issuing all writs and process, arranging our trial dockets and see that the Court program is carried along for the presiding Justice.

To say that the Clerk of Court's office and the County Attorney's office are coordinate branches of the State and County government is to reduce the condition to an absurdity. The Clerk of Court's salary exceeds that of the County Attorney twice and I am sure we will have a very able Clerk of Courts in one of the three candidates up for that office.

Such a statement connecting the two non-coordinate branches of the Court has very little merit save novel and should not serve to delude the voters, as each office acts independently of the other. If I am nominated to the office of County Attorney I should not assume to direct the management of the Clerk of Court's office and should not expect interference, assistance nor instructions from the Clerk's office in carrying out what I believe and stand for "strict enforcement of our Criminal Laws."

A RECORD RUN

Los Angeles to Skowhegan in 46 Hours

Skowhegan and Los Angeles have become comparatively near neighbors—only 46 hours apart. That was demonstrated by John B. Hymer, who arrived at Lakewood Wednesday morning having had breakfast in Los Angeles the previous Monday.

"It was a marvelous trip," said Mr. Hymer in discussing his adventure. "I took the Western Airways Express at Los Angeles on Monday morning, just after breakfast, arrived in Wichita at five o'clock that afternoon, was in Chicago Tuesday morning and landed in Skowhegan on Wednesday morning. The elapsed time for the trip was exactly forty-six hours."

"The people in the West are very much more air minded than in the East," continued Mr. Hymer. "The demands for the Western Airways are, in miniature, as fine as the Grand Central in New York, with covered runways to the bus and all possible conveniences at the Stations. There is a constant run of planes between San Francisco and Los Angeles. By train the trip takes more than twelve hours, by plane less than four, and they are in constant use. So far as safety goes the Western Airways have carried passengers for five million miles and never had an accident. They can land their plane on one motor, if necessary."

"On the trip our ship carried twelve passengers we had luncheon on board the ship, played cards, and it was much like being aboard a steamer except for restricted space, naturally. The big thrill was when the Pilot received word that there were storms ahead as we were crossing the Sierras, and he went up 12,000 feet to avoid them. So far as the passengers were concerned we did not know the difference in altitude. It is the ideal way to travel and, so far as expense goes, when one counts the time saved, the meals, Pullman charges, and other expenses, there is very little difference in the cost. Air travel has become so common in the West that the Companies have been enabled to reduce fares to the point where people of reasonable means can afford to use them."

In contrast with the trip of Mr. Hy-mer was that of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Byron who arrived at Lakewood on Friday morning to spend the summer. Mr. Byron closed his tour in "The Criminal Code" at Los Angeles Saturday night, May 31. They left Los Angeles on Sunday morning and were on trains for four days and five nights before they arrived at Skowhegan.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Congress Overrides Hoover Veto of Spanish War Pension Measure.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PRESIDENT HOOVER is not having a pleasant time with a congress whose mind is to a considerable extent fixed on the chances of re-election next fall. The majority in both houses is Republican but it isn't always "administration," especially when being so might cost some votes at the polls.

This condition was illustrated last week when congress overrode the President's veto of the Spanish war veterans' pension bill. In repassing the measure the senate voted 61 to 38 against Hoover, and those for the bill included 28 Republicans, 32 Democrats and one Farmer-Labor member. Only 14 members of the lower house, all Republicans, voted to uphold the veto, with 208 against it.

Vetoing any pension bill is painful for a President, and in this case Mr. Hoover displayed courage. His three objections to the measure were held by the press of the country for the most part to be well taken. The provisions he opposed are the reduction of the service period upon which pension claims may be made for disabilities of a non-service nature from 90 to 70 days; and that venereal diseases, drug habits or alcoholism, contracted at any time in the life of the veteran, shall constitute disabilities entitling the sufferer to a pension. He also contended that need should be an element of valid claim.

The enthusiasm with which both senate and house passed the bill over the veto is strongly reminiscent of the time when the Grand Army of the Republic was strong enough numerically to obtain from congress any legislation it desired.

WHAT will happen to the London naval treaty in the senate is still a matter of conjecture. Senators Watson and Moses last week urged the President to postpone the consideration of the pact until after the autumn elections, but he insisted on his plan to call a special session of the senate immediately after the adjournment of congress. This despite the warning from the two leaders that if the discussion proved to be protracted the senate might adjourn the special session and throw the whole question over to the winter session. Next day Senator Henry J. Allen of Kansas submitted to Mr. Hoover a plan that seemed to impress him.

The Kansas senator thought that the wisest strategy would be to bring the treaty before the senate at the present session, immediately following the passage of the rivers and harbors bill, but before the veterans' legislation is taken up. There has been much talk of the difficulty of keeping a quorum of the senate on hand to discuss the treaty, but Mr. Allen opined that few senators would dare go home before the veterans' bill comes up. Altogether, the effect of the situation, thought Senator Allen, would be to expedite the disposition of the treaty.

It was disclosed at the Navy department that contracts for the construction of the new aircraft carrier and two fleet submarines slated to be let before July 1 will not be awarded until after the senate has acted on the treaty. According to Secretary of the Navy Adams, contracts for no more warships will be let this fiscal year.

CERTAIN citizens who have been badgered, embarrassed and distressed by the persistent proddings of congressional investigating committees probably cheered—in private—for Bishop James Cannon, Jr., last week. That militant chairman of the board of temperance and social service of the Methodist church, South, and official of the Anti-Saloon league, challenged the authority of the senate lobby committee to investigate his political activities in the campaign of 1928, refused to reply to its questions and that connection and defied its implied threats to punish him for contempt, as others have been punished in similar circumstances.

Cannon was willing to tell a lot about his work as a lobbyist, "using the word in its legitimate sense," in behalf of prohibition legislation, but, as he stated to the press afterward, he insisted "that this singling out of myself and of the Virginia anti-Smith Democrats because we fought the wet Tammany candidate is a deliberate, intolerable infringement upon the rights of American citizens, and is a threat to independent citizens against a repetition of the independent action of 1928."

The bishop also told the press much about the disposal of money contributed by E. C. Jameson of New York for the anti-Smith campaign in Virginia—information he had refused to give the committee.

Senator Caraway, chairman of the committee, who was in Arkansas at the time, issued a statement upholding the bishop's stand and denying that the committee had a right to inquire into Cannon's political activities. The investigation was being conducted by Senators Walsh of Montana and Blaine of Wisconsin.

On Thursday Bishop Cannon repeated his refusal to answer the committee's questions, and then coolly walked out of the room without waiting to be excused. He was done, he said, unless the committee wished to subpoena him.

"If the bishop's defiance yesterday was not contempt, and I think it was, his action today is certainly a clear case of contempt," declared Walsh, whose opinion was echoed by a number of senators. The contumacy of Cannon probably will be reported to the senate with a request for contempt proceedings.

ON the more step in the President's dry enforcement program was taken when the house, by a vote of 218 to 117, passed the Wickersham bill designed to relieve congestion in the federal courts by eliminating jury trials in minor prohibition cases.

If it becomes law the measure will radically revise the federal court procedure in criminal cases extant for more than a hundred years. It provides that defendants charged with "petty offenses" shall first be given a hearing before a United States commissioner whose recommendations shall go to the District Judge for final disposal. The accused will be given a jury trial only if he demands it in a specified manner and time limit.

The house also adopted bills supplemental to the juryless trial measure, one of them defining as "petty offenses" all crimes involving a jail sentence of less than six months or a fine of less than $500, and another amending the Jones act to make the manufacture, transportation or sale of less than one gallon of liquor a "petty offense."

The Democratic party of Pennsylvania is now officially wet. The state committee, which was reorganized at Harrisburg, adopted a platform that recommends the repeal of the state enforcement act and the Volstead act and removal of the Eighteenth amendment from the federal Constitution.

THE French chamber of deputies opened its summer session last week with the opposition members ready with a dock of interpellations. Among the things they wanted the government to explain were the naval treaty, the serious Red revolt against French rule in Indo-China, national security and an oil scandal that has involved prominent officials. It was predicted in Paris that the Tardieu cabinet would not survive the summer.

IF THERE is a naval building race between France and Italy, the blame must rest with France, according to Foreign Secretary Dino Grandi of Italy. In a speech before the senate Grandi said that last month in Geneva he proposed to Aristide Briand that the two nations suspend their naval construction program for 1930 and that the French foreign minister refused to consider the proposition. The senate thereupon approved the government's policy of augmenting the Italian navy. Several of the senators declared the Mediterranean would be the theater of the next European war. Recently Premier Tardieu announced that the French would expend large sums for fortifications in the Alps. In reply, Senator Ricci of Italy urged the continued strengthening of the Italian frontier defenses in that region. Three questions divide France and Italy today, continued Senator Ricci. They are, first, control of the Adriatic; second, the status of Italians in Tunis, and third, the southern frontier of Libya. He repeated the oft heard charges that France was pouring arms and military supplies into Jugo-Slav ports.

GREAT BRITAIN was called upon to defend her regime in Palestine when the mandates commission of the League of Nations met in Geneva. Numerous complaints had been made of the British regulations, especially one curbing for a time the immigration of Jews to the Holy Land. T. Drummond Shiels, under secretary of state for colonies, declared that immigration was restricted only pending the receipt of an additional report and recommendations from Sir John Hope Simpson, who is now making a new survey of Palestine.

PUTTING a stop to the raids on the salt works, the rainy season came to the aid of the British in India. But the campaign of the Nationalists, though checked, has not ceased to function. The Gandhi followers and all the rest of them are now concentrating on tax resistance, which will be more serious than salt raids.

On the northwest frontier, where the Reds and wild tribesmen are giving a lot of trouble, British troops occupied several villages and took command of the situation, shelling the positions of the rebels in the hills.

TERRIFIC fighting was reported to be going on along the Yellow river between the Chinese Nationalist armies and the northern rebels, with the final results in doubt. Dispatches told of victories claimed by first one side and then the other. The outcome of this conflict may settle the fate of the Nanking government. Late in the week messages received in Shanghai said the northern troops had crossed the Yellow river sixty miles east of Tsinanfu, broken the Nationalist lines and reached the Tsinan-Tsingtao railway line in the vicinity of Chowan. The Nationalists also lost the important city of Chianhsia, capital of Hunan province, to a crowd of rebels and bandits called the Red army.

Apparently the Russians have given up hope of results from the Moscow conference between China and Russia on the Chinese Eastern railroad and have reverted to direct action along the frontier of northern Manchuria. The Nationalist government charges the Soviets have raided the town of Tacheli in Chinese territory opposite Biagovyshehensk and carried away a number of Chinese and also a large amount of farming machinery.

CARRYING twenty-two passengers and a large cargo of freight and mail, the Graf Zeppelin left Lakeland, N. J., Monday night for the return trip to Friedrichshafen. She had a pleasant and swift passage across the Atlantic until she neared the coast of Portugal, where a storm and heavy winds were encountered. It is hoped that the Zeppelin will be in Chicago late in August as one of the attractions at the national air races to be held there.

W. CAMERON FORBES, Boston banker and former governor general of the Philippines, has been tentatively selected as the new ambassador to Japan, according to information learned in administration circles. Mr. Forbes, a close friend of President Hoover, served as chairman of the special commission which recently completed a survey and report on the American administration of affairs in Manila.

IN RECOGNITION of his "outstanding contributions in the many fields of human service," the Louis Livingstone Seaman gold medal was presented to President Hoover by the American Museum of Natural History. The award of the medal was decided upon before Mr. Hoover's nomination for the Presidency but the formal presentation was delayed.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Floyd Unwin, unassuming, quiet, with a few friends, but not wealthy, takes a day's vacation from his job as a clerk in the office of the Elgar Radway, financial manager, and produces a written pledge which the three take to their college associates. Unwin produces a written pledge which the three take to their college associates. Unwin produces a written pledge which the three take to their college associates.

CHAPTER II.—Bettington, painting on the Maine coast, is caught in a storm and seeks refuge in a shack owned by Jonathan Gibbs, next morning, Bettington's clothes being ruined by the storm, he dons an old outfit of Gibbs and sets out to row to the nearest town. On the way he is decoyed to a motor boat and knocked senseless, afterward being conveyed to a vessel and kept prisoner. Gibbs discovers Bettington's boat empty and assumes he is drowned. In the painter's clothes he finds money and a New York address, Bettington's studio, Gibbs goes there. He is a fugitive from justice, and one night, alarmed without cause, he endeavors to leave by the fire escape, but falls to his death.

CHAPTER III.—Bettington, prisoner on the ship, sees Unwin and others come on board. Later Unwin goes to the deck. Bettington is questioned by a man known as the "Boss," and, explaining who he is, is shown an account of his death. Gibbs, a body having been identified as his, the Boss insists Bettington is dead. Gibbs, once famous surgeon, but now an escaped murderer, who had been known as Jonathan Gibbs, Bettington is told that Unwin's son and daughter are on board the ship, which has been chartered by Radway. The "Boss," though nominally the steward, is master of the boat, and means to hold Radway until the ransom money is paid for his release.

CHAPTER IV.—Bettington is introduced to the Radways, Mary and her brother, young Crosby Todd, wireless operator, and Captain Hallett, who he feels distrust him, as "Doctor White." The crew, Clements tells Bettington, are all outlaws over whom he has absolute power through his knowledge of their crimes. He also tells the painter he needs "Orme's" skill as a surgeon.

CHAPTER V.—Bettington is introduced to the Radways, Mary and her brother, young Crosby Todd, wireless operator, and Captain Hallett, who he feels distrust him, as "Doctor White." The crew, Clements tells Bettington, are all outlaws over whom he has absolute power through his knowledge of their crimes. He also tells the painter he needs "Orme's" skill as a surgeon.

The Boss leaned over the table and looked the other man full in the face. His hands were clenched and the blue that spoke was sharp and metallic.

"You heard what I said about quarreling over women? You risk a great deal by taking that tone to me."

"Less than you think," Bettington answered. He knew his remark would puzzle the other, and he was right.

"Do not let us misunderstand one another," said the Boss with a more brutal manner. "You and I stand to secure enough money out of this to take ourselves independent for life. . . . The others here are pawns on the board and can be sacrificed when the time comes. We must not permit our success by misunderstanding."

"I do not want Mrs. Radway in the boat and I don't want Metzger in one of his jealous rages to go to Hallett," Radway said. "There is always such a possibility in the air."

"And if it happened?"

"If I let loose, as you observed, in that case, your Mrs. Radway is in peril. Now she may possibly have to endure Metzger's staring at her. Make up your mind which is the more real danger."

Unquestionably the Boss gave good advice. Bettington felt that a man had never been in a more difficult position than that in which he found himself. To tell Radway what he knew was only to precipitate mutiny. And to wait until the plot matured, seemed almost criminal. Unfortunately Hallett was one of those honest and estimable men who imperil undertakings very often by their suspicions of what they do not fully understand. It would be very difficult to explain the situation to him and prevent him from disclosing that knowledge by an accusing face and a greater severity of demeanor.

The Boss broke in on his reflections. There was in his voice no longer the sharp assurance of the commander. Almost, Bettington thought, he detected an air of diffidence.

"You had the reputation of being one of the greatest surgeons of our day," he began. "Supreme skill always commands my respect. I had no idea of your ability until I read, almost a year back, an article in the Lancet on the operation they call by your name."

"One can't give up work of that sort for ten years and get it back. Blackport, Maine, killed all that."

"Those long sensitive hands of yours don't show me that you have lost your skill. Some time when we are not so tired, I want to have a long talk to you about certain surgical matters. I may need your help."

Bettington was startled. "You'll need a higher aid than mine, if it's anything serious."

"It is not a major operation, but it needs a man with the skill you used to demonstrate. I shan't need you yet. This business must be accomplished first. If you do what I want I will give you my word that I shall forget all your past life. You will be free."

"You forget that you told everything to those three men."

"They may not be in a position to bear witness against you. They are outlaws, remember."

Bettington went to his room in no calm frame of mind. The Boss had evidently decreed wholesale death. But for the moment the time was not come for action. Not until a month had gone by would Clements attempt to extort his ransom.

CHAPTER VI

The Surgical Smile

Bettington was awakened next morning by the consciousness that the Albatross had stopped and was rolling gently. He rose and dressed quickly, and ere he had finished the yacht was under way once more.

On deck he was surprised to see Elgar Radway striding up and down briskly. There was an amazing look of vigor and health about him. He came cheerily to the other's side.

"I have just had a delicious swim. It invigorates one. I dived down an enormous distance and left all my aches behind me."

So that was why the Albatross was stopped. Bettington followed the owner to the saloon. It was his habit to eat sparingly at breakfast. Plainly it was Radway's habit to eat a huge meal. He was concerned at the other's small appetite.

"Take a dip with me tomorrow morning and you'll eat better. I eat a great deal because I work a great deal and need the fuel. The worker, if he works hard and at high speed, must eat and drink all he can."

"There's a limit somewhere," Bettington warned.

"That's the difficulty," the capitalist admitted. There was already that burning sensation at the pit of his stomach.

"Clements!" he called. "A little of that old cognac; not a pony—bring it in a cocktail glass."

"Clements seems a remarkable man," Bettington hazarded. He was anxious to know more of him.

"A disbarred lawyer," Radway answered. "Find a gambling place of the highest class at Saratoga, once. He must have lost it all or he wouldn't need to attend to the catering and so on, and wear a livery. Odd smile of his, isn't it? I believe it's a kind of paralysis. Reminds me of that old phrase we used to hear of the smile that wouldn't come on."

Under the influence of the old French brandy, Radway's discomfort was dulled. He was beginning to find,

Under the influence of the old French brandy, Radway's discomfort was dulled. He was beginning to find,

"That's the difficulty," the capitalist admitted. There was already that burning sensation at the pit of his stomach.

"What is it?" he demanded, as he followed Clements through the saloon door.

"That d-d Unwin boy," the other said impatiently. "He's a nuisance to the men. I don't think it's anything but."

Bob, looking very pale, had a scarp wound. Examination proved it to be less serious than the forecable had assumed. The dressing of it was well within Bettington's range of skill. He had tied miles of bandages in his day.

"Now, my lad," he said kindly, "how did this happen?"

Bob explained that Sam wanted a photograph of his sister, and when he would not give it, had taken it by force and in the struggle knocked him down. Bob was very miserable.

"Wait here," Bettington commanded. "I'll see what can be done."

Captain Hallett received him, as usual, with a great deal of suspicion. Bettington explained the nature of the accident and its cause.

"If you would allow this lad, Bob Unwin, to take advantage of your nephew's kindness and berth with him in the wireless room, where there is plenty of space, I should be greatly obliged."

"That's a clever way of planting a spy amongst us," sneered Hallett. "How am I to know what you are saying is true?"

Bettington set a guard on his temper. He tried to realize how Hallett must be charged continually by the authority which Clements was allowed.

"But the boy is the brother of your owners' secretary."

"He stays where he is," said Hallett. "One minute," Bettington cried. "Ever since I've been aboard you've shown hostility to me. There has been absolutely no reason for it. Why have you done so?"

"Because you're a friend of Clements, and he has undermined me with Mr. Radway, as I've no doubt you are trying to."

"I've not given you enough thought for that," Bettington answered; "but I may as well warn you, I shall ask Mr. Radway to let that boy come out of the forecabin."

He sought out Radway and put the thing before him.

"Do as you please," Radway said. Bettington went back to his first patient.

"I've got leave for you to shift your quarters. The wireless operator told your sister he'd take you in hand. Take my advice, and keep out of people's way. I refer particularly to the skipper, who resents my interference, and the owner, whose temper varies according to the time of day."

The boy forgot his pains in the prospect of being able to leave the society of the crew and see his sister. Presently Radway went below. When Bettington came on deck it was deserted. He took the opportunity to make an investigation of the Albatross.

Metzger was not in the engine room. Bettington looked anxiously at Kenzie. He was planning ahead and needed allies. He wondered what hold the Boss had upon this engineer who seldom, or ever, left his engines, except to sleep.

The cook welcomed the chance to talk. "What's good for a sick stow-ach, Doc?" he inquired.

"Fasting," he was told. This time Bettington had a good look at the chef. He was a very fat man and his eyes were too close together. The first glance showed him a gross, jovial man; a closer inspection showed him to be scheming, sensual and vain.

Bettington went from the galley depressed. In order to feel assured of success in case he had to declare open war against Sam, Metzger and their commander, he had at least to remove the disparity in numbers by recruiting some of the men to his cause. So far he could only think of Silvers, minute representative of the insubstantial Cherry Hill district which lies along the lower east side of New York's water front. Bettington knew the gamblers of that district. Silvers had probably started life, feeling the hand of the law was against him. He would readily fall in line with those who arrayed themselves against established order.

On his way to his own quarters Bettington saw Clements.

"By the way," he began, "I wanted to ask you about meals. Am I supposed to dine with the Radways?"

"No," said Clements. "You mess with the officers. That is Hallett, Leary, Metzger and Hallett's nephew. I usually mess in my room. I'd like you to share lunch with me today. There are certain business matters I want to discuss."

"Very well," Bettington answered. It was eight bells when Silvers brought luncheon into the room. At half past twelve the lad had removed the dishes.

"I have half-an-hour before I need put on that damnable jacket and ask Hallett if he wants a second helping. I beg you to believe, Doctor Orme, that I am not a servant by accident but by design."

"I know all that is interesting of your career," Clement went on. "Do you know anything of mine?"

"Absolutely nothing."

"Never. I'm sure of that. My memory for faces is unfailingly good."

"And yet," Clements went on, "my face has been in almost every big newspaper in the world. There have been rewards for my apprehension which in the aggregate exceed those ever offered for another man."

Bettington smiled politely. It was as though he did not want to awaken the other from a pleasing delusion.

"I see you do not believe me. That is part of my triumph. Did you ever hear of Reuben Beardsley?"

"Not to my knowledge."

"And yet you had no more sincere admirer. He was in one of your classes in surgery. To him there was no such operator in the world as Andrew Orme."

Bettington said nothing. This resurrection of another man's past was apt to prove embarrassing.

"That's all left behind long ago," he observed at length. "How could I ever hope to get famous as a surgeon with Sam Quentin hanging over me?"

"You will have no need to make money when this trip is done," the Boss reminded him. "Your pupil, Beardsley, is dead."

"Too bad," Bettington murmured. "He was young to die." It seemed a safe comment.

"It was a very serious blow to me, and it's an amazing coincidence that the master can finish what the pupil began. I was in luck there. Listen, Orme. At a word I can send you back for that sentence which will end only when you die. Furthermore, I am not putting myself in your power. You may never know my real name. I could look calmly at the very detectives who had spent years looking for me because I gaze at them with a different face. I will wager that you have seen the face I wore for years. When my bank failed, with such disastrous results, I was in every paper where illustrations are found. Yes, you know the real me. But Clements—the man you are looking at—is only a year old and his past is blameless. It took Beardsley a year to re-create me and it will take you a few minutes probably, to rectify one mistake."

Bettington had heard, often enough, of the comparatively new branch of surgery which devoted itself to the face. He had associated it with beauty parlors and quackery in general. Now, suddenly, he was convinced that what Clements said was true.

But to find that he was expected to undertake some of it was horrifying. He shrank from the idea, but would not permit Clements to see it.

"Beardsley must have cut a nerve, for suddenly I found myself with this damnable smile. It never leaves me. Orme, I haunt myself. . . . Sometimes I think I cannot go on living, unless the curse is removed from me. I thought everything was well done. I had finished with Beardsley before I knew."

Bettington wondered what was the cause of Beardsley's death.

"He died of pneumonia," said Clements, as though he had read the doubt in his companion's mind. "It was a sad blow to me."

"He was never strong," Bettington found himself saying, with gravity.

Reluctantly Clements rose and put on the steward's livery coat.

"In this drawer," he said, "you will find some of the most recent books on operative surgery. They may refresh your memory. Take them to your room."

They proved of no benefit to Hallett and Bettington. Their idioms were beyond his comprehension. He put the books aside and went out on deck. Mrs. Radway was sitting in a chaise longue, writing letters. He looked up at Bettington and smiled as he passed.

"I am driven to writing letters to people I have almost forgotten. I'm afraid this is going to be a very dull month, doctor."

10:45 Morning Worship, Subject of sermon by the pastor, "What is the Future of Faith?"
Can Faith survive in the changing order? Yes it can, but will it? What are some of the things that destroy faith?

Can we discard some things that our fathers believed and still hold firmly to what we discard. What do we regard the fundamentals? That depends upon as central the Christian Faith?

Let us come together next Sunday morning and consider some of these questions.

7:00 Children's Day exercises. This is the Glad Day for the Children of the Church School. Our workers have prepared a splendid program for their encouragement and for their own edification let us all attend this service.

Ralph Whitman boards at home and goes back and forth to his work at Milton. Robert Whitman is helping him and goes with him.
Dan Hill and family called on friends at Monmouth, Sunday.

I read in some items in the Citizen where a correspondent tells us the frost is nearly out of the roads around Bethel and traveling pretty well settled. The frost is all out on High Street and nearly time for more, the season must have been some late in that section.

Everyone has his planting done and the rains help the good work at age.

Marion Hill and friend were at Indian Rock Camp, Sunday.

School has finished in Paris, all are glad for the rest.

Preventing fires the year around reduces the fire loss in your town.

NEWRY

Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Walker of South Paris were at their home here last Sunday. Mr. Walker has some men cutting and peeling timber for him.

Clinton Littlefield and Mr. Day of Locke Mills were callers at William Walker's last Sunday also Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Powers and Bert Paine.

Quite a number went from here to North Newry Church last Thursday afternoon to attend the graduation exercises of the boys and girls of the Grammar Grades.

The school closed here last Friday with a picnic for the scholars. Ice cream and cake for refreshments.

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Brown of Norway were in town last Sunday.

GREENWOOD CENTER

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Abbott and family from Mechanic Falls, were at their cottage Sunday.

Harry and Walter Sweeney of Portland, were callers in this vicinity, Sunday.

J. Burton Emery, the Rawleigh dealer, was through the place one day last week.

Mrs. E. T. Roberts and family of Locke Mills, and Donald Belisle were visitors at L. L. Martin's recently.

FARMINGTON NORMAL GIVES

ANNUAL MUSICAL PLAY

"Her Song" is to be given by the graduating class at Farmington. Miss Lucille Small is to play the leading role of Christine, the daughter of Emile Kronlein (Harold Libby).

The plot centers around the old musician Emile, who twenty years previously had been deserted by his wife Adele (Doris Gammon).

Mr. Allan Jones plays the part of Craig Randall, Christine's sweetheart. Other interesting characters are the O'Haras (Clayton Cronkite, Virginia Glines and Myron Starbird) who assist Christine in her desire to be an actress. Over one hundred chorus girls are in colorful dances including "Sada Pops", K. Kimball, M. Walker, M. Flint, G. Morrison, E. Butcher, T. Grant and M. Randall, "Bobbed Haird Baby", B. Lynn, M. Gansher, P. Burr, H. Avery, A. Townson and E. Morton.

At a time when the information begins to be quite worthless, we find that "cutty sark" is Scotch for short skirt, and not a fishing smack, as we heretofore fondly imagined.

And what has become of the old-fashioned movie showing a fellow filling a telegram at a Western Union office, followed by a closeup of the message, on a Postal Telegraph bank?

"Do you own a radio set?" asked the 1930 census taker, that being one of the questions he is required to ask. "No," replied the apartment dweller. "I live with several, but I do not own one."

"What makes children noisy?" inquires a columnist. They need to develop lung and leg power so they will be able to compete with the self-advertisers and dodge the automobiles.

All is not so well between Brother Charley and the new flame: It appears he picked up her family album the other night and remarked, "Why, Baby, I didn't know you cared for cartoons."

The latest telephone novelties are a connection with a steamer at sea, and a long distance wedding of a Texas girl and an Ohlonee imagine getting a wrong number, and finding you have married the Levintan!

The ties of a common tongue are a great aid to understanding, of course, and still a British detective story is always twice as mysterious to us on account of the custom of calling the second floor of a house "the first floor."

Henry Ford believes that the world opportunities are just beginning to break.

In Carphilly, Wales, there is a leaning tower that leans nearly twice as much as the one in Pisa.
